IN THE NEWS

Weber State Academic Fraud Investigation

The Weber State football program was penalized for violating academic unethical conduct rules. A math instructor completed coursework for five student-athletes. The instructor obtained the student-athletes' usernames and passwords and took online quizzes, tests, and exams for the student-athletes. All five student-athletes were declared ineligible.

KEY TAKEAWAYS

1. Student-athletes must complete their own school work.
2. Only authorized personnel (individuals appointed by OSAD) may be involved with student-athletes' course work and those individuals must follow OSAD policies.
3. Student-athletes who do not submit their own work (e.g., having others complete online tests, copying someones work) may face ineligibility, expulsion, or loss of financial aid.

CROWDFUNDING

Crowdfunding websites (e.g., fanpay.org) are websites that accept donations from the public on behalf of current student-athletes. Below is the current guidance from the NCAA regarding crowdfunding websites.

- Student-athletes who accept such funding now or who agree to accept it in the future jeopardize their eligibility.
- Even if student-athletes wait until their eligibility expires to accept the funding, it would create an institutional violation, which means that ASU would be punished.

STUDENT-ATHLETE EMPLOYMENT

Student-athletes may be employed at any time during the year as long as they are:

- Paid at the going rate in the locality for similar services;
- Paid only for work actually and already performed; and
- Not paid because of athletics reputation.

If you plan on working during the remainder of the spring semester or the summer, please log into your ACS account and complete the Summer Employment form. You can access ACS by visiting ica.asu.edu/acs. Log in with your MyASU information.

As part of the employment review process, the Compliance Office may contact your employer. Please have your employer promptly respond to any requests for information.

VEHICLE REGISTRATION

All vehicles used by student-athletes must be registered and kept up to date with the Compliance Office by filling out the Automobile, Scooter, and Motorcycle Registration form in ACS.

Please complete the form to the best of your ability. Incomplete or insufficient information will require the Compliance Office to follow up with you.
